It may be a gaping hole on Sunol Boulevard, now but by the end of the month this all will be paved over to provide a left turn lane for traffic heading out of town and wishing to turn to Sycamore Road. Eventually Sunol Boulevard will be widened to four lanes, but the county traffic engineer who drove up when our photographer was there didn't want to venture a guess when that will happen. Not for the record, anyway.

District must pay designer

The Murray School District is in the process of paying architect James Aitken of the Cousteau-Aitken firm $281,885 for planning of a school that may never be built.

The precise figures owing to Aitken, who has had a master planning contract with the district for some 15 years, came to light as the result of a State Allocations Board action Monday in Sacramento.

What the action does is permit the district to relinquish $31,930.91 in bond monies to reimburse the Cousteau-Aitken architectural firm in Oakland for planning the solar energy system proposed for the Dolan intermediate school site off Castilian in Dublin.

However, because of declining enrollment and defeat of a $1 million bond issue by voters last March, the State Allocations Board five months ago said the Murray district did not qualify for funding.

Until such time as the declines turn to growth and the district can pass a bond issue, there is virtually no chance of a school being built on the Dolan site or anywhere else in the district.

The Murray school board has terminated its master planning contract with Aitken, having paid off remaining monies accruing to him. He and the district still have ties through the Dolan school site planning contract, which the district says amounts to $281,885.

Prior to the March bond issue, the district had the site graded and cleared, in preparation for what it believed would be construction of a seventh-eighth grade school with a unique solar energy system incorporated.

Now the district is considering the prospect of selling the 27-acre school site and has had one recent inquiry, that from the Valley Christian Center. The latter's request for additional information on the site was received at Monday's board meeting.

At the meeting of the State Allocations Board Monday in Sacramento, assistant superintendent Heinz Gewing was given a brief report of the Director of General Services for the state.

The report states, in review of the total situation, that application for an intermediate school on the Dolan site was approved April 16, 1974. On October 20, 1975, the SAB considered the district's request for including a solar energy system with the school to be financed with a proposed ERDA grant.

But due to an enrollment decrease, construction funds were not apportioned for this project. Subsequently, the district's application for the ERDA grant was denied.

The report adds, "Since the district is not currently qualified for additional apportionments, it is unlikely that this school will be constructed in the near future."

"Relying on an anticipated enrollment increase and the promise of federal assistance the estimated $465,947 solar energy system was designed (by the Aitken firm). The district has submitted invoices indicating planning costs of $31,930.91. The district proposes to sell bonds to pay for these planning costs."

The bonds referred to would likely be those still remaining from the successful 1972 bond election.

Gewing is the only Murray administrator presently available to provide information on the payments to Aitken as business manager Phillip Chubb will be on vacation status until next Wednesday and Superintendent Donald Williams is recuperating at home from a flareup in a heart condition.

Chubb previously submitted his resignation effective Dec. 1. He is vacationing in the Soviet Union and Helsinki, Finland. Williams is not expected back before the first week in November.

Red tape may preclude red rumps

LIVERMORE — Spanking in school may be banned by the Livermore Unified School District by the beginning of next year.

School board members Tuesday night gingerly talked about whether or not to allow spanking and paddling in school. Because of a new state law, the district is required to adopt a policy either permitting spanking — with a series of limitations and lots of paperwork — or banning it altogether.

Nobody wanted to appear in favor of hitting children, and in fact trustees Jim Davis and Dr. James McFarlane said they don't spank their own children.

Superintendent of Schools Leo Croce didn't express his personal opinion, but said 16 school principals had voted, by about a 7-9 vote, to ask the board to retain spanking as a form of punishment.

By a split vote, trustees decided to post for first reading a policy banning spanking in the district. The policy must be read publicly, with an opportunity for discussion and change, at three meetings before it becomes school district law.

Two mothers, Frances Harper and LoRayne Cole, spoke out in favor of spanking.

"It gives the principal an alternative," said Mrs. Harper, adding that three of her four children at Green and Christensen Schools have been spanked.

Mrs. Cole said she knew of a kindergartener who regularly disrupted class for the first three weeks of school, then was swatted once by the teacher and never caused trouble again.

"A good swat every now and then does not hurt 'em," she declared.

Taking the opposite viewpoint was Gail Sidhur, who said one of her children had a teacher in Livermore who had a paddle for every year he taught.

On each paddle were engraved the names of all the children he hit with it during the year.

Board members winced and trustee McFarlane confessed that he'd been paddled as a child in school.

"It didn't do any good," he laughed, reddening, then added: "Kids who are brought up in a home where this (spanking) is the case probably do not respond to very much else."

Board member Betty Carrell thought the new state restrictions made the spanking process "too wishy-washy." The state requires parents to file a "Prior Permission Form"; then the principal or whoever is punishing the child files a spanking report; and finally there's a follow-up form to see whether the spanking has done any good.

In addition, the teacher or yard supervisor or whoever has asked for the child to be spanked must be there when the punishment is administered, along with another witness.

Most board members said they were put off with the deliberate, cold-blooded nature of the punishment and the red tape surrounding it.

Jim Davis said he felt a spanking at home was usually followed by "an overabundance of love," convincing the child that the punishment was for his own good. In school, he said, there is seldom an opportunity for the same kind of follow-up.

He suggested that instead of forcing administrators to be the "heavies," a note or phone call home could suggest that the parents spank the child for something he or she did in school.

Scott Rychnovsky, a non-voting high-school representative to the board, took a stand against corporal punishment. "A good teacher has a lot more effective ways of applying peer pressure," he said.

The final tally was Ken Englund, Jim Davis and Manuel Prado against the corporal punishment policy, McFarlane and Carrell for it.

Turning then to the alternative policy banning spanking, the vote was 4-1, Carrell opposed.

Las Positas General plan eye opener

Alameda County Bureau

HAYWARD — Three alternative general plan amendments for the valley — one guaranteed to raise more than eyebrows — got their first airing before county planning commissioners yesterday.

The plans range from city-controlled growth in Livermore and Pleasanton along with development of the Las Positas Valley, Harlan Geldermann's board of supervisors' backed proposal for some 45,000 people north of Livermore, to full development of the Las Positas "New Town" and no growth in either Livermore or Pleasanton.

The third alternative offered in the two-hour work session before a bare quorum of four commissioners eliminates "New Town" and allows the cities to grow at their already defined rates.

Livermore's general plan calls for a 2 per cent per year maximum population increase, while Pleasanton's rests on a final population of some 47,000 in 1995.

Allowing the cities to grow within their own projected rates and eliminating the controversial Geldermann proposal, the valley would hold 43,900 "household units" in 1995, a figure which translates roughly to 114,140 to 142,370 people.

The addition of "New Town" would boost the total number of households to 58,900, and the population to 153,140 to 183,120.

But the third and most controversial offering would allow development of "New Town" and no growth in the cities or Dublin and would boost the valley's population to a compromise 121,160 to 143,330 people in 46,600 homes.

"To remain within the funding and population constraints of State Water Resources Control Board policy on the LAVWMA system," the voluminous preliminary draft says, "this county policy would require cessation of growth in Pleasanton, Livermore and Dublin."

Population projections vary because of the uncertainty of the future family's size. Estimates range from 1.7 persons per household to 3.8 per-

Livermore man's sensational engine

LIVERMORE — A new type of engine that could give 40 per cent better gas mileage was unveiled yesterday by Sandia Laboratories.

Invented and built by Livermore resident Harvey Pouliot, the five-cylinder engine utilizes a mechanism that changes the length of piston stroke, and thus the horsepower, as the accelerator is depressed.

The variable displacement engine has a maximum horsepower of 100 as the piston stroke changes from one to 4 1/4 inches. The cubic inch displacement varies from 43 to 190.

Computer projections and dynamometer testing of the prototype engine show similar exhaust pollution to conventional engines.

"We are in the very early exploratory stages of this engine concept," says Pouliot. "Additional refinements have been identified which should further improve fuel economy, probably enough to offset any penalty which might accompany emission controls, and we feel the engine should ultimately improve average gas mileage about 40 per cent."

Linkage that controls the length of piston travel, and thus the power, is connected to the accelerator. When the gas pedal is depressed, piston travel increases and the car speeds up.

In conventional engines, the throttle control changes the fuel-to-air mixture. Unless operated at full power, the car is running at greatly reduced efficiency.

Peak fuel savings are realized when the Pouliot engine is operated at less than full power. Conventional engines use only about eight horsepower for level cruising at 30 mph in a heavy car, so they operate at relatively poor efficiency.

Detroit automakers have expressed interest in the engine concept, but will make no commitments regarding its future. Sandia has shared information on the design with automakers, and received data on emissions and other engine design problems.

The Pouliot engine uses standard materials and present-day manufacturing technology so it can be readily adapted to mass production. Friction loss is said to be greatly reduced, decreasing heat and engine wear.

At 60 mph, the engine operates at about 2000 rpm, compared to 3,000 rpm from conventional engines. This could mean that transmissions for a car with a Pouliot engine might be easier to make.

"It's not anything that can be manufactured next year," Pouliot said. "It could be four to eight years down the road."

Funded by the U.S. Energy Research and Development Administration, the engine has so far cost $275,000 to develop.

The engine was started up for the assembled press yesterday, and ran with little vibration. It was started and ran fine the first time it was tried Nov. 20, researchers said, and has run several thousand test miles since then with no problems.

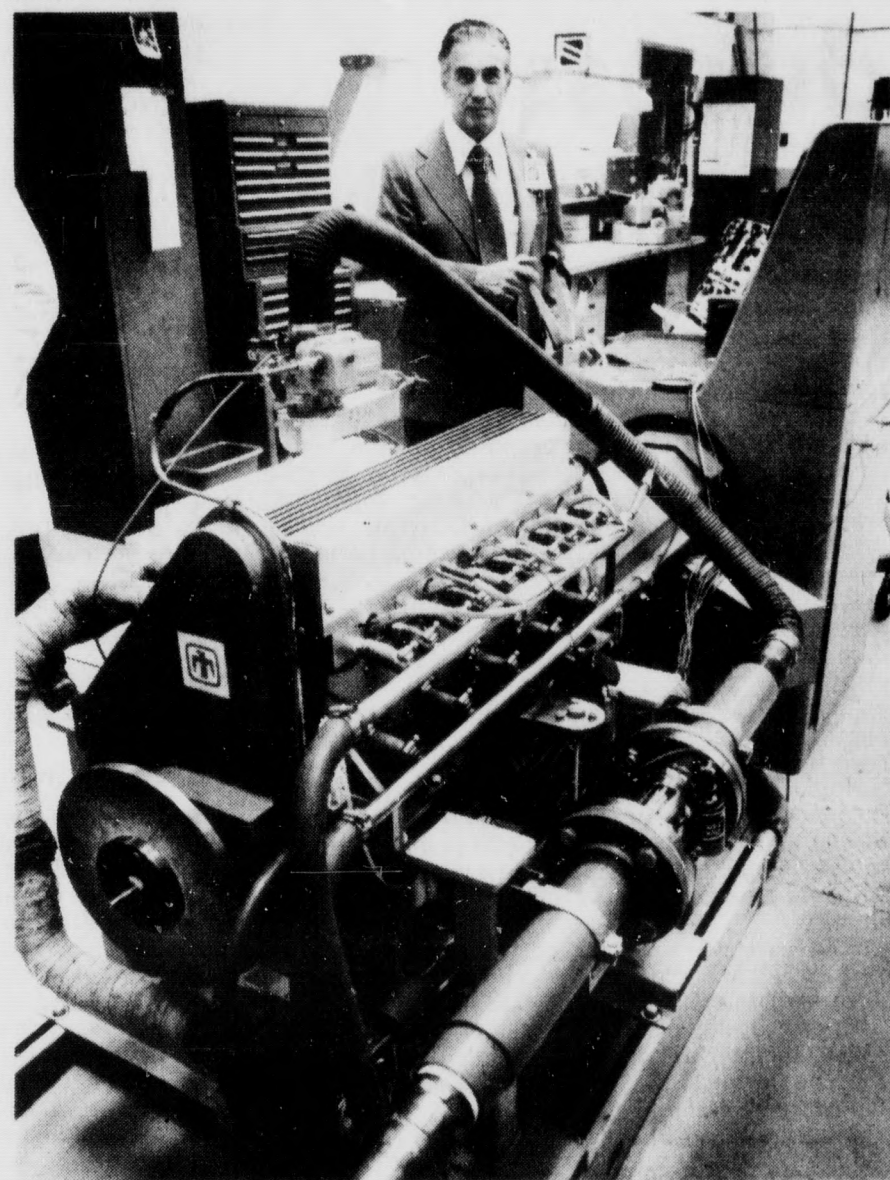

Pouliot, of Chateau Way in Livermore, has been rebuilding engines since he was 14. He received his first patent before he graduated high school, and since has patented many inventions relating to refrigeration and power transmission equipment.

Married and the father of five children, Pouliot is modest about the design. "There's really nothing new about it — patents on variable displacement engines date back to 1914."

Pouliot said he designed the engine during the 1974 fuel crisis. The engine had to save fuel, while maintaining the same drivability, "produceability," and construction costs of present engines, he said.

If mass produced, Pouliot won't receive a dime, having assigned all his patent rights to the government.

Another Oak Tree map to planners

PLEASANTON — Another map has been filed on the controversial Oak Tree Center and the planning commission will hear the item Nov. 10.

Residents living near the proposed center told the city council a few months ago that they don't oppose the center, but they do object to the way it is designed. They felt the parking and traffic circulation for the proposed supermarket would come too close to their back yards.

Crux of the problem was the one acre of public and institutional use which abuts their back yards. That kind of use is fine with them because it won't be used at night, so it's a good buffer from the traditional neighborhood center which will rise on the central and western portions of the five-acre property.

But developer Chris Berattis' first plan had some of the neighborhood center parking lapping over to the public and institutional zone's one acre.

The new plan helps ameliorate that problem by incorporating a 30-foot landscaped area between the homes and the public and institutional zone. And the center has been scaled down approximately 6,000 square feet in retail footage, so presumably there will be less demand for parking.

However, the planning staff has not had a chance yet to count all of the parking spaces on the map and examine the rearranged building configurations to see if the residents' objections about spillover parking have been satisfied.

Berattis has moved the supermarket approximately 100 feet to the west, apparently to pull that parking magnet away from the residents. However, a curb cut on Valley Avenue which residents thought would pull big trucks into the end of the lot near their homes remains in the second plan.

Berattis' original plan had a 27,000 square foot supermarket and a 14,700 square foot retail building in addition to the 4,000 square foot public and institutional use building.

The new plan still has the 4,000 square foot public building, but the supermarket has been scaled down to 20,800 square feet. The other large retail building has disappeared and most of its square footage is in a new configuration next to the supermarket. Total retail square footage exclusive of the market is 19,400 square feet.

The new plan also has a restaurant of 3,432 square feet proposed for the west side of the site near Hopyard Road, bringing the entire center's total area to 47,632 square feet compared to 53,600 square feet in the original plan.

In the old plan 243 parking spaces were required and 264 were provided. The new plan requires 230 spaces and 274, including 16 for the handicapped, are provided.

Teacher talks uncertain

PLEASANTON — A negotiations session between Pleasanton teacher representatives and the administration today will determine whether the teachers unit declares an impasse.

Meeting at the Pleasanton Hotel Wednesday afternoon, individual school reps reported on the support of the unit-called boycott of extra-curricular unpaid duties.

Tom Zach, president of the Amador Valley Teachers Association, said district-wide the boycott was "85 per cent effective."

He said support ranged from a high of 23 of 25 teachers at Alisal to a "low" of 70 per cent at Fairlands.

Zach said the action to bypass extra-curricular duties would continue until such time as "we have a contract that is satisfactory to us or the representative council decides to stop the action."

Pressed for what might cause the latter, Zach admitted that angry parent response could make the council reconsider.

If teacher negotiators feel no gains have been made, Zach said an impasse would be declared Friday morning and a request made to the Educational Employment Relations Board (EERB) to send in a mediator.

Contra Costa tax picture

By PAT KEEBLE
Leshar News Bureau

MARTINEZ — Contra Costa's 1976-77 property tax rates are generally down in the Central County, but most homeowners there will find their tax bills are higher.

Using sample tax code areas in each community, Leshar Newspapers determined that cumulative rates are down as much as 9.4 per cent, continuing the trend started with the passage of tax ceiling legislation in 1972.

The rates are down even more—as much as 20 per cent in Concord, for example—when compared to those predating the 1972 legislation, thanks primarily to constraints on school district income.

But the downward rates have not begun to keep pace with the inflationary increases in property values in the same period.

Tax bills are to be mailed from Martinez Friday afternoon.

County wide, the assessment roll increased 13 per cent this year. But in smaller jurisdictions some windfall resulted from increases averaging much higher.

Home assessments are up an average of 35 per cent or more in Martinez and the San Ramon Valley due to a general reappraisal of each property which had not been done in those areas for three to four years. Some property values were increased 50 per cent or more.

In the Acalanes High School District, including Moraga, Orinda, Lafayette and Walnut Creek areas, values were increased 15 per cent by computer, and in the Mt. Diablo school district, including Concord, Pleasant Hill and Clayton, homes were computerized 10 per cent upwards.

Business and industrial properties are reassessed each year.

Most of the tax rates levied by cities were down this year, with the exception of Antioch and Pittsburg, which each voted sizeable increases.

The county government rate was down 10.9 cents, which will mean a saving there of about $13 for the owner of a $50,000 home.

Sample cumulative rates — those charged by all taxing agencies in a given area — show these comparisons to last year:

Concord — $11.897, down 11.4 cents of slightly under 1 per cent.

Pleasant Hill — $11.781, down 35.4 cents of about 2.9 per cent.

Clayton — $11.302, down 14.2 cents or 1.2 per cent.

Martinez — $11.232, down 73.4 cents or 6.1 per cent.

Walnut Creek — $11.765, down $1.08 cents or 8.4 per cent.

Lafayette — $11.192, down 71.1 cents or 6 per cent.

Orinda — $11.971, down $1.242 or 9.4 per cent.

Moraga — $11.611, down 73.6 cents or 6 per cent.

Danville — $12.464, down 84.5 cents or 6.3 per cent.

San Ramon — $12.415, down 27.5 cents or 2.2 per cent.

Pittsburg — $12.651, up 41.1 cents or 3.4 per cent.

Antioch — $11.472, up 31.8 cents or 2.8 per cent.

Brentwood — $11.958, down 8.8 cents or .7 per cent.

Oakley — $10.171, down 29.8 cents or 2.8 per cent.

(Rates are multiplied against each $100 of assessed property value in order to obtain the amount of taxes involved.)

School district and other education taxes continue to amount to a major proportion of all property taxes taken in, although the percentage is dropping due to the tax ceiling laws.

The laws limit school districts as to the amount of income they can receive, regardless of source, per student. Since most of the school districts in the county are gradually losing students, they are being forced to drop their tax rates as assessments rise.

All education taxes used to invariably account for 55 to 60 per cent of the cumulative rates, but this year in the Concord sample area, for example, they will take 50.3 per cent and in Moraga 54 per cent.

In Walnut Creek the education percentage has dropped to 49 per cent and only 43 per cent in Martinez.

Education rates include those charged by the school districts, including an equalization rate charged in non-unified areas which have both high school and elementary school districts.

Then there is the Contra Costa Community College District rate, rates for County School Services including programs for the handicapped, juvenile hall, and other special programs, and, for the first time this year, a listing for the county Superintendent of Schools.

The Board of Supervisors wanted taxpayers to know how much of its rate goes for the Superintendent of Schools, an office the board would like to see abolished. It does not separate the rates needed to raise funds for welfare, health roads, criminal justice or other county government functions.

Candidates discuss Dublin fate

DUBLIN — Valerie Raymond and John Murphy revealed four key issues uppermost in the minds of Dublin residents yesterday when the two candidates for first district supervisorial position spoke at a Dublin Chamber of Commerce luncheon.

Each expressed viewpoints five minutes at a time on incorporation of Dublin, the proposed pipeline, industrial development and effectiveness of county services.

"I would certainly respect the wishes of the Dublin residents regarding incorporation," said Raymond. "But, personally, I believe Dublin would be better off incorporated."

Murphy announced the Alameda County Board of Supervisors had approved a $1000 grant that would be given to the Dublin chamber to subsidize their impartial feasibility study of incorporation.

"I think it is important to get the information concerning this issue then let people decide what is best," said Murphy.

Neither candidate was certain that annexation to Pleasanton was the answer for Dublin. Murphy reminded chamber members that Dublin residents had voted two to one against that issue a few years ago. Raymond felt Dublin people would prefer to retain their separate identity.

"But whatever they decide, if I'm elected, I would work closely with the citizens to help them whenever and however possible," Raymond said.

Raymond supports the pipeline issue but thinks there might be better alternatives. She does think now is the time to vote it in since 87 1/2 per cent of the project is being funded by federal and state monies.

"And there's that $6000 a day fine to consider," she added.

Murphy thought the pipeline should be larger in case extra capacity would be needed later.

"I do support it since expediency is important now," said Murphy. "But I meet the situation with mixed emotions."

Raymond expressed concern about the turnover and high rate of commercial zoning in Dublin.

"Zoning is a kind of implied commitment," she said. "The county has a duty to see that Dublin's commercial core remains a vital one."

She agreed that light industry should be welcomed but believes there should be stricter controls regarding commercial zoning.

Murphy said the county could reconsider zoning problems after the general plan is reviewed. He reminded the audience that 87 acres at the corner of San Ramon Blvd. and Dublin Blvd. had originally been set aside to build a regional shopping center. It did not materialize since Dublin residents backed off after Pleasanton became incorporated and announced it would put up a center across the street.

Regarding county services, Raymond thought Dublin could obtain a higher level of them if there was local control.

"That does not mean Dublin has to form its own police department. They could operate on a contractual basis; at least for a while," she said.

Murphy suggested the Dublin area was paying for services they were not getting.

He thought increased police protection would also increase taxes.

"Maybe it would be best if residents contracted police service for a time before finally deciding what they want to do," said Murphy.

sons, while the Environmental Protection Agency uses the "E-Zero" rate of 2.6 persons per home.

According to planning department staff, full development of the valley — the cities, Dublin and "New Town" — would produce an average population of 177,000 that required 71,000 jobs. The valley could provide 38,000 commercial and service jobs and another 17,000 "basic jobs" in industry, research and government.

Assuming the same percentage of valley residents commute to work through the Dublin Canyon, another 16,000 jobs would have to be provided from outside the area.

Freezing growth in the cities and building "New Town" would create the need for 55,000 jobs, and leave some 8,000 commuters on the road.

Similarly, eliminating

"New Town" and letting the cities meet their growth goals would mean 53,000 jobs and about 8,000 commuters.

The report, which planning personnel emphasize is a "partial preliminary draft," pays heed to clean air and water constraints imposed by state and federal governments and notes their maximum population limit of 131,000.

Funding for utilities and water and sewage plants would be cut off if the limit were exceeded.

The report examines the environmental resources and constraints of any general plan amendments for the valley, including cultural and "socio-economic" factors; delves into existing policies and regulations, and examines issues "because they enable us to understand problems in the valley, thus allowing us to propose policies and ultimately a plan," says the report.

Three public hearings are planned, said department director Bill Fraley, adding "many more are expected before the issue is resolved."

The report "has been worked on aggressively for the last 8 or 9 months," he said, and correlates existing city and county general plans while noting "some very significant environmental problems" in the area.

Resolution of a final draft will come "only after a closer liaison with city planning commissions and staffs," added Fraley.

To date, public hearings are set for 8 p.m., Nov. 16, at Foothill High School in Pleasanton and 1:30 p.m., Nov. 9 in Hayward. A third, as yet unannounced hearing will be held sometime in December.

Horner pleads not guilty

LIVERMORE — Jack Raymond Horner, accused of shooting his wife to death in their Dublin apartment Oct. 14, yesterday pleaded not guilty to charges of murder in Livermore Municipal Court.

Horner, temporarily represented by attorney Leon Anderson, was told to return to Judge John Lewis' courtroom Nov. 3 at 2 p.m. for a preliminary hearing into the charges. If enough evidence exists the case will be transferred to superior court for trial.

Attorney Paul Mansfield will represent

Horner at the preliminary hearing, Anderson announced.

The 66-year-old retired dental equipment salesman is charged in the shooting death of his wife, 49-year-old Barbara May Horner, found in the hallway of the couple's 7581 Amador Valley Blvd. apartment. A .38-caliber revolver was found lying next to the body.

Horner was discovered in a semi-conscious state in the bedroom. He will remain at Santa Rita Jail pending the preliminary hearing.

Zone 7 unit holds rate for water

LIVERMORE — By a 5 to 1 vote, the Zone 7 water management board last night voted to maintain last year's treated water rates, setting aside a proposed 16 per cent increase.

Due to rising costs Zone 7 staff had proposed an increase from the present $120 per acre-foot of treated water to $139. The increase almost certainly would have been passed on to consumers.

Before the Zone 7 directors could vote to maintain last year's rate, letters of concurrence had to be obtained from the retailing agencies — Livermore, Pleasanton and the Valley Community Services District. If unanimous agreement had not been reached by November 1, rates would have been increased.

Chairman George Lydiken cast the dissenting vote, saying, "I can't see giving away a quarter million dollars when our costs have gone up."

Collins 25th anniversary

The surprise buffet reception honoring Edward and Eleanor Collins of Pleasanton on their 25th wedding anniversary was held at the Veteran's Memorial Building in Pleasanton.

Hostesses were the couple's daughters, Jane and Susan.

In attendance were James Collins, best man, and Pearl Barrett, matron of honor, Virginia Radosevich, Wayne Barrett and Louis Clements, all members of the original wedding party.

Other honored guests were Hazel Barrett, Elly's mother, and Thomas Jeffers, Ed's uncle.

The four-tiered cake was topped with the couple's original wedding ornament, and two bottles of champagne from their wedding were presented by Charles Novascone, Ed's brother-in-law. One was opened at the reception, and the other will be saved for the couple's 50th anniversary.

The Collins were wed at St. Mark's Church in Richmond, Calif., Oct. 7, 1951.

Gouvaia - Lane

Wedding bells rang this summer for Jeanette Gouvaia and Wallace (Steve) Lane, both of Livermore, as they exchanged nuptial vows at Holy Cross Lutheran Church of Livermore with the Rev. Milton Johnson presiding.

Standing at the bride's side was Matron of Honor Denise Gouvaia, her sister-in-law, with Jeff Lane, the groom's brother, as best man. The groom's children, Kim and Kevin Lane, served as flower girl and ringbearer, respectively. The bride's brothers, Ron, John and Mark Gouvaia were ushers.

The newlyweds honeymooned at Lake Tahoe following a reception at the Veteran's Memorial Building in Livermore. They reside at Marguerite Street in Livermore.

Jeanette is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Gouvaia of Livermore and a graduate of Livermore High School. She is employed by Reynolds Industries Inc. of San Ramon.

Son of Mrs. Margaret Lane and the late Wallace Lane, Steve is an employee of Safeway Stores in Livermore. A Vietnam veteran, he attended Chabot College.

Soilless gardening explained

More and more people are turning to hydroponics for home gardening in containers because of its many advantages.

What is hydroponics?

"It is simply a plant-feeding method consisting of nothing but water, inorganic salts and air," says Hunter Johnson, Jr., UC Cooperative Extension vegetable specialist.

The term was used first in 1937, he says, to describe a method of feeding plants in which the roots were immersed in an aerated dilute solution of fertilizer salts. This method bypasses the long process needed to change a manure or organic material into an inorganic salt.

"Solution culture" is the term now used for this basic form of hydroponics to distinguish it from "soilless culture" which is recommended for the home gardener.

What is soilless culture?

As name implies, it is gardening without soil.

A container is necessary; this can be a trough, pot, flower box or any other receptacle, preferably with good drainage.

Instead of filling the container with soil, it is filled with a growing medium or aggregate which will provide support for the plant roots. Gravel, sand, volcanic rock and other relatively inert materials will support and furnish air to the roots as well as serve as a reservoir for the solution of water and fertilizer salts necessary for growth, says the scientist.

Artificial soils are also available which are prepared from materials that are more like soil in their water-holding capacity. They include mixtures of peat, vermiculite and wood shavings. These artificial soils which are very light in weight are probably the most practical for the home gardener who wishes to grow plants on a patio, deck or balcony.

Ready-made formulas containing the necessary inorganic salts are also available to provide sufficient plant nourishment.

Never overwater; this prevents air moving through the root zone and may cause the plant to wilt or die, but be sure to water often enough to keep the medium moist.

What are the advantages to soilless gardening?

Artificial soils are light in weight and easy to handle; they are ordinarily free of diseases and weeds, and provide better drainage and root aeration than many natural soils.

Indian, Spanish cultures meet in old mission music

Mission music out of California's past will come to life this weekend in an authentic program which blends Medieval, Renaissance and Native American music.

Courtesy of the California State Parks Foundation, "Early California Mission Music" will be presented at St. Michael's Catholic Church in Livermore Sunday, Oct. 24 at 3 p.m. Sponsors are the Livermore Cultural Arts Council, the Livermore Bicentennial Organization, and churches of the Livermore-Amador Valley.

Performed by the John Biggs Consort of Santa Barbara, the concert was researched from original manuscripts. It features sacred music from Spain of the 13th to 17th centuries, songs and dances of the California Indians, and later music of the combined cultures.

Accompanying instruments are both contemporary and historic—hurdy-gurdies, wood flutes, recorders, bells.

The John Biggs Consort specializes in Medieval and Renaissance music, and is devoted to capturing both the authentic sound of early music, and its expressive quality. The consort has toured nationally since 1967, has appeared at the Ashland and San Diego Shakespeare festivals, and has made an award-winning film "Discovering the Middle Ages."

Tickets to the concert will be available at the door. General Admission is $3.50 for adults, and $2.50 for senior citizens and children under 16.

PAL workshop

Valencia is refreshing

Salvatore Valencia will conduct the four-session workshop in watercolor and acrylic painting sponsored by the Pleasanton Art League Saturdays from Oct. 23 to Nov. 13.

Participants will assemble at the Pleasanton Cultural Arts Center at 9 a.m., and then proceed to an outdoor location in the valley for painting until noon. Artists may participate in any two, three or four sessions at $5 per session.

Valencia is known for his refreshing approach to painting, and ability to render watercolor paintings quickly and spontaneously. He has judged art shows for the Livermore Art Association and Pleasanton Art League, and exhibited at Walnut Creek's Valley Art Center, and the Way-Up Gallery in Livermore.

First place recognition for Valencia has come through the East Bay Watercolor Society, the Livermore Festival, the Lodi Grape Festival, the Lodi Acampio Show, the Central Cal Art League, Concord Art Association, and St. John's Religious Show at Sacramento.

He is currently a member of the Pittsburg Cultural Arts Commission.

Reservations for the workshop sessions may be made through Dorothy Gordon of 4457 Linda Way, Pleasanton, at 846-5801.

Free forum at Oakland

Persons interested in the future of art and new directions in community awareness of art may find informative a free series of three forums on "Art in the Community" sponsored by the Oakland Art Council at the Laney College Theater, Ninth and Fallon Streets, Oakland.

The Oct. 23 forum focuses on "The Appearance of the City: Preservation and Redevelopment," and features Professors Loren Partridge and Allan Temko with distinguished panelists.

The Oct. 30 forum on "Public Funds for the Arts" features Clark Mitze, executive director of the California State Arts Council. The Nov. 6 forum on "How Art Fits into People's Lives" features Professors Peter Schellin and Nelson Gravurn and panelists.

Registration for all forums begins at 9 a.m., with a brown bag lunch break and concluding comments at 4 p.m. For information call Robert Feinbaum at 451-6300.

Sal Valencia brings a fresh approach to PAL's fall workshop starting Oct. 23.

'On the Green'

"Chicken on the Green," an old-fashioned box lunch social and band concert will be hosted by the Pleasanton Cultural Arts Council Sunday, Oct. 24 at Wayside Park in Pleasanton.

The Pleasanton Bicentennial Band will serenade picnickers as they enjoy a Kentucky Fried Chicken dinner plus homemade dessert and coffee. Cider will also be available.

Tickets may be purchased at the Pleasanton Chamber of Commerce office, the Pleasanton Recreation Department, Warren Wade Art Etc., and the Pleasanton Cultural Arts Center. Proceeds will finance equipment for the center and uniforms for the band.

Picnickers are advised to bring a blanket or lawn chair.

Foster of Fremont offers new course

Valley artists will have an opportunity to receive instruction from a new personality through the Pleasanton Recreation Department this fall beginning Monday, Oct. 25.

Instructor Don Foster of Fremont, well-known as a lecturer and demonstrator throughout the western United States, will offer a course in painting through Dec. 13 at the Pleasanton Cultural Arts Center, Mondays from 9:30 to 11 a.m. Students may register at $18 per person through the recreation department, or call 846-3202.

Foster has appeared before more than 80 art associations in the West, and taught "on location" workshops along the California and Oregon coast, in Hawaii, Colorado, Arizona and Canada. His most recent workshop was conducted in Wyoming's Grand Tetons.

His text, "The Don Foster Seascape Manuscript," has attained national distribution, and he has owned and operated his own gallery and school of art with a faculty of 12 in Southern California.

Foster is currently an instructor with the Fremont and Burlingame recreation departments, and the holder of a California teaching credential as an oil painting teacher.

He places emphasis upon art principles and a logical step-by-step working procedure as he clarifies methods of achieving originality.

No specific degree of ability or experience is required, as the course is planned for beginners seeking a solid foundation, and those who have painted for years but suffer from artistic limitations.

By AL FISCHER

An entirely new entertainment industry strata has developed in the last decade, or perhaps more accurately has gone from peep show to pop culture.

The pornographic film industry now has its own production facilities, executives, actors and actresses, theatre outlets and commands the better part of a full newspaper page in major city markets.

Until last Saturday we had never viewed an expressly pornographic film...though some films making the rounds of the so-called legitimate movie palaces are unbelievably crude in treatment of sex or violence.

What we started out to see was a double bill with "Deep Throat" and "The Devil in Miss Jones."

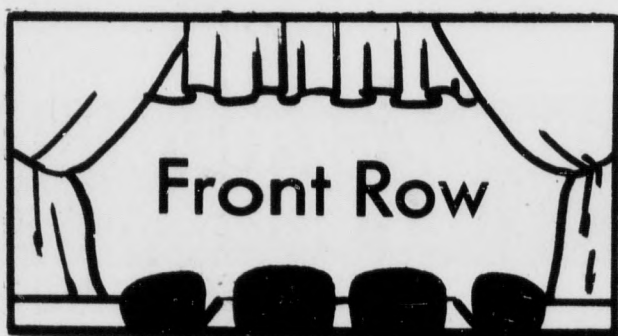

Unfortunately, the latter was being screened when we arrived.

Now these two films, particularly "Deep Throat," have received wide attention as being the epitome of pornographic film-making. "Deep Throat," if you listen to the erotic film critics, is a classic.

Perhaps.

We never got that far because after approximately 25 minutes of gutter filth, sickness and vulgarity that "The Devil in Miss Jones" is, we left.

Once upon a time there was such an institution as the Hays Office, which served in a film censoring capacity. Obviously, there are no more censors, watchdogs or standards-and-practices commissions in this country—at least not for motion pictures or magazine publications.

If "Deep Throat" and "The Devil in Miss Jones" are among the highest examples of the pornographic film "art" one hesitates to wonder what the milieu playing in the dozens of houses in San Francisco and other Bay Area cities are like.

If all this sounds like a thinly-veiled suggestion for some form of review or standards-and-practices for a particular industry (the porno film industry), you're right!

To declare such films as listed as pornographic would be glorifying them. And even though "you-don't-have-to-go-if-you-don't-like-that" is a convenient catch phrase in rebuttal, the fact remains some of these films are an outrage to public decency. And possibly a corrupting influence which this country does not need any more of.

The 20th Annual San Francisco International Film Festival concludes this weekend with films from France, Switzerland and Germany.

Friday's presentations at 7 and 9:30 p.m. include "One Night Stand," a controversial drama filmed in English in Hong Kong, and Terrence Stamp and Jeanne Moreau starring in "Man," an English language science fiction version of time travel and the Orpheus myth.

Saturday, the Festival bills "Jonas Who Will Be 25 in the Year 2000," an unorthodox social comedy, and "The Marquise of O," an 18th century romance by Eric Rohmer, director of "My Night at Maud's."

Two little theatre offerings for those who want to travel a few miles...

The California Actors Theater in Los Gatos offers Shakespeare's "Hamlet" through this Sunday. Time and ticket information may be had by calling (408) 354-6057.

At the Hillbarn in Foster City, at the other end of the San Mateo-Hayward Bridge, "Sunshine Boys" is the comedy attraction Fridays and Saturdays at 8:30 p.m.

Nostalgia!

Glassware from the Twenties to the Fifties will take the spotlight at the first show sponsored by the Livermore-Pleasanton Nostalgia Club Etc. tonight at Joe Michell School in Livermore. The show from 7 to 10 p.m. also incorporates collectibles such as Nippon porcelain, Haviland china, Fostoria, Cambridge, Heisey, carnival glass, mechanical bands and glass telephone insulators. A bicentennial table of colored Depression glass, as well as exhibits on autumn and holiday themes will be featured. Special guest, Mrs. Karma Vullo of Fremont, will answer questions about carnival glass. Admission is free to the public and refreshments will be served.

Boris Schapiro says today's hand was played in a rubber bridge game. Maybe so or maybe Boris made it up. In any event it is a beautiful hand.

South bid rather slowly because West had bid his seven-card suit and North his void. But after North went past game, South jumped to the slam.

West opened the king of hearts. The contract appears to be a hopeless one. It would have been against a club lead, but after considerable thought South found a way to bring it home.

He ruffed the heart at trick

Ask the Jacobys

An Illinois reader wants to know if there is any difference between a trick awarded because of a revoke and a trick taken normally. The answer is a decided "No".

As an example, let's take a four-spade contract. Declarer makes nine tricks, but an opponent has revoked. He is deemed to have made an over-trick at his four-spade contract. If declarer revoked, he is three down.

Ex-Cowboy sues Phillies

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. — Former Livermore High School pitcher Pat Bayless Friday filed a $4.6 million lawsuit against the National League East champion Philadelphia Phillies in United States District Court here.

Bayless alleges that the Phils failed to provide him with adequate medical care and that the club failed to pay him for the remainder of his contract when back injuries ended his career in 1971.

"They knew I had a back operation when I was 15," Bayless reportedly told the Livermore Independent. "I should have at least had x-rays and a myelogram. Instead, I was simply drugged up and sent out to pitch."

After one such outing with the Eugene Emeralds of the Pacific Coast League, in which he allowed four hits and three earned runs in three-plus innings, Ems manager Andy Semenic told Bayless he was to be released.

Before baseball went sour for Bayless, he went 6-8 on the Emeralds 1969 PCL champs before earning another shot at AAA ball with a 1.96 earned run average as a starter for the Reading, Pa. affiliate of the Phillies.

But he threw only 15 innings before being released in mid-August of '71.

Bayless told the Independent he hoped his suit would warn young ball players of the potential drug hazards involved in professional baseball. He added that he hoped the Phils would settle out of court "for baseball's sake."

Warriors cut rookies

OAKLAND — Guard Robert Hawkins and rookie Bob Lauriski were placed on waivers Wednesday to trim the Golden State Warriors to 13 players, one over the 12-player National Basketball Association roster limit.

Four-year veteran Dwight Davis was placed on the injured list, meaning he must miss five games. When he is ready to return, a team spokesman said, "we'll have to make another decision" to get down to the limit.

Coach Al Attles said slashing Hawkins and the Utah State rookie from the team were "the toughest cuts I've ever had to make in my career."

The action sends the Warriors into their season opener Friday night against the New York Nets with three centers, towering rookie Robert Parish from Centenary and veterans George Johnson and Clifford Ray.

The other rookies to make the squad were 6-6 forward Sonny Parker, a two-time Southwest Conference MVP from Texas A&M, and Marshall Rogers, a 6-1 guard from Pan American.

Hawkins, Golden State's third draft pick in 1975, averaged 3.9 points in 32 games last season.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL
NEW YORK — Michigan maintained its No. 1 position in The Associated Press college football poll, garnering 58 of a possible 62 first-place votes.

PHILADELPHIA — A $6.5-million deal which would bring pro basketball superstar Julius Erving to the Philadelphia 76ers from the New York Nets awaited only the final approval of Nets' owner Roy Boe, The Associated Press learned Wednesday.

The deal, it was learned from pro basketball sources, could be completed later Wednesday night at a private meeting in New York. It reportedly calls for the Nets to get $3 million for Erving, who would then sign a multi-year contract with the 76ers for a reported $3.5 million.

The 76ers, whose owner F. Eugene Dixon has been publicly estimated to be worth $150 million, are

Gaels Get Bye Saturday

Saint Mary's Galloping Gaels put it all together in the second half to defeat Oregon Tech 36-21 and even have an extra week to savor the victory. The Gaels draw a bye this weekend.

Saturday, Oct. 30, the Gaels travel to the Los Angeles area to challenge the Azusa Pacific Cougars. Saint Mary's takes a 3-3 slate into the Southland and with three games left to play. The Gaels will face two of their 1975 victims. Last season SMC defeated Azusa 24-9 and shut-out San Diego University 18-0. Saint Mary's closes the '76 season in San Diego on Nov. 13.

In Saturday's comeback win, the Gaels were virtually dominated in every category except points, taking advantage of key Oregon Tech miscues to post the victory.

Coach Jim McDonald's charges reached into a bag of tricks and in the second half pulled out a safety, a fumble recovery in the end zone, an interception return for a TD, another fumble recovery inside the ten and a record-breaking 57 yard field goal to stun the visiting Owls.

Gael kicker Kevin Shea "dominated the game like no kicker I've ever seen" enthused McDonald. All the sophomore sidwinder did was kick a pair of field goals, four extra points and punted six times for a 46.2 average including a 64 yarder that put the Owls back on their own 1 yard line late in the final period. His 57 yarder put the Gaels in front for the first time in the game, 22-21 and erased the 40 year old mark set by Lou Ferry in 1936 against Fordham in New York.

Erving trade to Philly possible ready for the deal, it was learned. So are Erving, known in the basketball world as Dr. J., and his manager, Irwin Weiner.

But Boe, it was further learned, could still turn thumbs down on the transaction.

Erving refused a month ago to report to the Nets unless the New York team renegotiated his contract. He signed an eight-year contract at $350,000 a season with the Nets after he was acquired from the Virginia Squires in 1973.

Pat Williams, general manager of the 76ers, refused to confirm or deny the proposed transaction.

If Williams could pair Erving with George McGinnis, the AllStar forward who came to the 76ers last year from the Indiana Pacers of the American Basketball Association, it would make Philadelphia the favorite to win its division and probably the National Basketball Association title.

Since joining the Nets, Erving has been the league's Most Valuable Player three times. Last season he led the Nets to the last ABA championship, before the league finally folded and its top teams entered the NBA.

Many people have questioned the value and accuracy of high school athletic polls.

Some observers feel that polls are too subjective and that the true caliber of the team can only be determined by playoffs.

This so-called subjectivity of polls may be the reason Granada High School dropped from fifth to ninth in the San Francisco Examiner's Bay Area Ratings for football teams this week.

The Matadors took an impressive 21-7 win over a tough Dublin squad last Friday. That alone would seem to merit at least a stationary position in the poll.

But apparently the Examiner's Board of Coaches didn't feel that way. Unlike the East Bay Prep Writers' Poll, about 25 selected coaches from the Bay Area select the top 20 teams each week. Many of them know little or nothing about teams in the other parts of the Bay Area.

"I know very little about the San Jose area or the North Bay," admitted Granada coach Don Couch, who is a member of the select committee. "I usually just pick the top eight or nine teams from the East Bay when the Examiner writer calls in each week. I don't even take the Examiner so I didn't know we dropped in the standings."

Of course, the Examiner Board of Coaches shouldn't take a lot of flak for their opinions. The poll takes in an area from Santa Cruz County on the south to as far north as Santa Rosa and Vacaville. There are about 150 schools in this area and selecting the top 20 teams is an awesome task each week.

Bellarmino of San Jose and the West Catholic League is this week's top-ranked team. That seems to make sense since they have a 6-0 record and play in a very tough league, perhaps the toughest in the Bay Area.

However, after that confusion reigns. Vintage of Napa is ranked second: A tough team no doubt but that school plays in the 3-A Division of the North Coast Section. The schools in that division aren't generally up to the par of the North Coast 4-A schools (of which the East Bay Athletic League is a member).

Saratoga, Cardinal Newman of Santa Rosa (another 3-A school) and Alhambra round out the top five.

Los Altos is ranked sixth and College Park is seventh. The irony in this is that College Park is first in the EBPW poll yet is ranked behind Alhambra in the Bay Area Poll. Alhambra beat College Park, 27-13 in the first game of the season but that was due primarily to a bundle of dropped passes by the Falcons and the fact College Park is a traditional slow-starting team.

So are these polls, any polls, really valid?

"I'd rather see the rankings done by playoffs but more than we have now," Couch stated. "I would like to see the 4-A and the other North Coast Section Division champions playoff for the section championship at the end of the season."

All well and good, coach but that would still leave the question of the "official" Bay Area prep champion up in the air.

There are about 60 high schools in Santa Clara County (including, of course Bellarmine) and many of them would undoubtedly competitive to the best in the NCS.

"I saw Bellarmine and Leland of San Jose play last season in their playoffs," commented Hal Briggs, head coach at Pleasant Hill High and another member of the Examiner Board of Coaches. "I was very impressed (Leland won, 9-3). They had good quickness, excellent execution, and depth, particularly Bellarmine."

What's the answer then.

I personally would like to see a playoff between the Central Coast and North Coast Section champs at the end of the season. Of course, some observers would say this would make the grid season too long but why not eliminate some (or all) pre-season games and start the season a week or two earlier.

Some San Francisco and Oakland observers

Rain delays Reds' express

NEW YORK — A clash of politics and baseball loomed Wednesday when rain postponed the fourth game of the World Series between the Cincinnati Reds and the New York Yankees.

A battle between bats and balls could conflict with the battle of words that is the final presidential debate between President Gerald Ford and challenger Jimmy Carter, scheduled for Friday night.

But the President foresees no deadlock, telling Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, "We'll work something out."

Of course the Reds could make the whole matter academic by winning Thursday and sweeping the Series.

But if they don't, there would be a time problem. The starting time for night games for the Series telecast by NBC is 8:30 local time. The presidential debate is slated to begin at 9:30 p.m., EDT.

Kuhn told the White House he would like to start a Friday game at 6 p.m. local time and hope it would end before the telecast of the debates on all three major networks, according to Ron Nessen, White House press secretary.

Nessen then said Ford told Kuhn extra innings would cause no problem and quoted the President as saying, "We'll work something out."

The original schedule for the best-of-seven-game Series called for Friday to be a travel day between the fifth game in New York and the sixth in Cincinnati, should they be needed. The final debate between the two major presidential candidates figured in the original schedule.

The weather forecast for today was good, and there seemed no chance of a repeat of last year's three days of rain that delayed the sixth game of the 1975 Series between the Reds and the Boston Red Sox.

The whole question of a Friday game may be academic. Cincinnati has won the first three games of the Series and needs just one more victory to wrap up its second straight world championship.

Sparky Anderson, manager of the Reds, thinks his team can do more than it has in the first three games against the Yankees.

"We are playing well," said Anderson, "but we are capable of playing better, and I think we will."

How could the Reds improve?

One area, said Anderson, is at the top of the batting order where leadoff man Pete Rose and No. 2 man Ken Griffey have managed just three hits between them in the first three games. Only once, in the eighth inning of the third game, have they delivered consecutive hits.

Anderson said the Reds would play more aggressively today.

"We have to take it to them," the Reds' manager said. "We're going to lay it wide open right at the start. We're going to press them. Their outfielders are going to have to throw, because we're going to press 'em."

Pete Rose wasn't sliding into second base yesterday. Nobody was as the Series game was rained out.

Drumtra continues hot pace

Rene Drumtra fired a 637 series and 235 high game in again leading the Men's Classic League in Granada Bowl Winter League action last week.

As a result Drumtra maintained his 213 average.

Larry Ely gave Drumtra a battle in the same loop with a 255 high game and 633 series. Fred Davis, who has a 164 average, bowled a 626 set and a high game of 233.

Frank Shenave led the Guys and Dolls League with a 224 high game and 621 series. Gril Brabec bowled a 242 high game in posting a 618 series. His other games were 178 and 198.

BICENTENNIAL FACTS

The frontier was no place for squeamish women during the Revolutionary War. Women faced not only rape by enemy soldiers but also abduction, scalping and torture by the British-allied Indians. "Mad Anne" Bailey, the "White Squaw of the Kanawha" in what was then western Virginia, served as patriot scout, messenger, and Indian fighter. A superb horsewoman, Anne rode the frontier in buckskin breeches. The World Almanac recalls, recruiting "Liberty Men" to fight.

Williford's ranch hands were supreme

Lee Williford fondly remembers those fuzzy days when he would take to the courts and terrorize the East Bay Division of the Diablo Valley Athletic League with his mighty Livermore High basketball team.

Williford, coach of the 'Pokes from 1952-63, guided Livermore to six championships and a consolation title in the prestigious Tournament of Champions in 1961, the year Erwin Mueller blossomed into a premier basketball star. Mueller still stands as the only valley high school athlete ever to make it in the professional ranks.

Although now safely in the background as tennis coach of Granada, Williford was once the center of attention in valley basketball circles.

"I could yak basketball to you all day long," smiled Williford as he tried his best to wander down memory lane.

"We had some really fine teams," he started, "but I think one of the best teams we had was my first year as coach." The 'Pokes won the championship that year, in what Williford calls a "small league." We were in the East Bay Counties Athletic League. That was back when Emeryville was in the league. We were all pretty small."

One player from that first team, Tom Rahder, had a little cousin who one day became whom Williford remembers as "probably the best basketball player in our area."

Erwin Mueller played eight years later on Williford's team and led the 'Pokes to the TOC consolation.

"He didn't say too much," recalls Williford of Mueller, who went on to play pro basketball stints in Chicago, Los Angeles and Detroit. "His dad would always come over and called him 'Irving.' He's been a long-time friend of mine."

Mueller's senior year was overshadowed by the fact the 'Pokes didn't make it back to the TOC. Livermore lost a close playoff game to Pittsburg after beating them the year before.

"Pitt had a string of years where they were a good basketball team," says Williford. "In the second game when Mueller was a senior, he fouled out just one minute into the half. Pitt won in overtime. That kept us out of the TOC. We had a little more incentive to win the year before," says Williford. "We had lost to Pitt by 15 points in a pre-season game."

Williford was a staunch conservative when it came to playing basketball, and a minor revolutionary when on methods of improving the team.

"We played a pattern game, with not so much running," he stated. "We took a lot of criticism for it. We didn't try to ever humiliate anybody, but we always seemed to win."

Williford was collared one day by a coach who claimed, "If I had Mueller on my team, he'd be scoring 30-35 points a night." Williford was used to such antagonizing by fellow coaches.

"Our pattern game had a lot going for it, and Erwin went I along with it," says Williford. "It took the pressure off the kids, and we didn't rely on one big scorer."

"If you have five guys working, and they're all part of the offense, your morale is going to be up. Erwin had very few 20-point nights, but I've seen guys who score 25-35 points a night and they don't win championships. If we didn't have to run, we ran patterns. If we had one thing going for us, it was that total team effort."

Williford was quick to add the importance of rebounding to his championship clubs. "I'll tell you one thing we had that I haven't seen since. Erwin and (Terry) Dailey would get 30 rebounds apiece every game. They had the boards down good. And they had pride in that."

Williford remembers the hotly-contested battles between the big four teams in the DVAL-EBD: Alhambra, Albany, Livermore and John Swett. Amador and St. Vincent's, along with Liberty were never really tough to beat. "Alhambra had some good athletes. They won all their games in the 54-55 season, but didn't win the championship since then."

The 'Pokes usually split honors with Albany, who carried some fine teams through the late '50's. "Albany was always competitive, and what an aggressive team they did have. It was always us and Albany."

Except for one year. In the heyday of the Livermore championships of the late '50's-early '60's, John Swett somehow came away with a title. They did it by beating out Livermore twice, and finished with a 9-1 record. The Cowboys were second at 8-2. The coach of that surprise team was none other than present Amador High School Principal Ralph Laird.

"He was a good coach, a fine man, and did a good job coaching his players," remembers Williford. The year of the John Swett miracle was 1960.

The following year turned out what Williford calls the "Ideal" basketball team.

"We had six guys, an ideal combination of people. (Steve) Zodtner and (Dennis) Strieff at the guards played good defense, and then we rotated our four big men: (Steve) Harrison, Smith, Dailey and Mueller."

Zodtner, now a pharmacist in Livermore, and Strieff got along pretty well, according to Williford. "The two guys got along like brothers."

Harrison was a rarity of basketball type. "Teachers would tell me he really had a fabulous head on him. He was probably one of the most brilliant students I've had."

"They had to run him right out of the gym at midnight," says Williford, who encouraged Harrison to practice at the beginning of the season when told he would be shooting a lot more. "His mom would call and say, 'Can't you just assure me that Steve will keep his grades up? My God, he's living in the gym!'"

"Steve walked up to me one day and said, 'Why can't you get me a key to the gym?' I'd say, 'Now how can I do that?' And he would tell me, 'Well, they did it with Oscar Robertson of Cincinnati.' He was really serious all the time, too."

Monte Maniz, who played from 1952-54, was "the only guy who practiced more than Harrison," says Williford. "The best high school shooter we've ever had." Maniz is now a real estate dealer in Livermore.

Other players that quickly come to Williford's mind include Frank and Dave Rierson. "I could tell you a story about Frank, but you couldn't print it." His older brother, sticks in Williford's mind. "He's one of the kids I'll long remember in my coaching."

While Williford's Ranch hands hardly ever lost a game to Amador High the rivals were still quite intense. Although the winner's of late has switched hands to Amador, the rival is still quite intense.

"We use to play in a little gym. They always felt they could beat us, but the never could seem to do it. They didn't have much luck. One year, though, we were co-champions. They've done better in the last few years."

Still other players come to Williford's mind. "Hal Sinclair (now the Athlete Director at Granada High), I'll never forget," he laughs. "He was guarding Bob Garibaldi (former San Francisco Giant pitcher who at the time was with Stagg High School), and Hal's only about 5-7. Garibaldi was a big man. Hal, to this day, will never forget that. He thought it was the worst thing. Actually, what we were trying to do was put our center out of the jump ball and have him try and grab the ball with his long arms, since we knew he couldn't outjump Garibaldi anyway. Only one kid was 6 feet tall that year, and I believe we won the championship."

Once when the 'Pokes were playing a small mountain school at the Tracy Tournament, Williford was confronted by an angry fan of the losing school after the game the 'Pokes won, 75-30. "What a lousy team you are, and what a lousy coach you are!" Williford remembered the fan as saying. "I told him, all Crosby could do was sing. That shut him up."

When speaking of Ruben Garcia, a sense of sadness takes over Williford. "He died at an early age of a blood clot or cerebral hemorrhage," Williford recalls. He was an awful quick guard "Don Couch would remember him. He could change directions as a full-back on angles, not arcs." Couch, now head football mentor at Granada, was coaching varsity football at Livermore the same time Williford coached basketball.

"He and I have been good friends for years," says Williford of Couch. "We were the first people start filming football and basketball games back then. We also started a snack shack to raise money for films. We got enough money from the sales to buy films and cameras. That was never done before."

"I've always thought he was the best football coach I've ever seen," lauded Williford.

Williford also started a weight program, along with Couch, for the first time. "I was really skeptical that weights would help a basketball player," he says. "We bought some weights from this place in Hayward that was going out business."

After the first few programs, Williford admitted things weren't going quite healthy. "We could hardly comb our hair when we got out of the showers," he explained. "But after a while we stayed with it. Now he (Couch) runs a pretty good weight program here."

Williford moved from basketball coach to Dean of Boys in 1963 at Livermore

High. After later becoming vice-principal, Williford moved his family to Lake County to a town called Kelseyville, where he was a principal at a school of only 250 enrollment.

When Williford moved to Dean of Boys, Clancy Crew became head coach and Pat Fracisco, who coached the junior varsity basketball team, accepted the head coaching spot at newly-opened Granada High.

Williford moved back to Livermore from Kelseyville in 1973. "Our kids were just coming into high school, and I wanted to work at one school and have them play at another," he explained. His two sons, Scott and Steve, play for Livermore High's tennis squad while Dad coaches Granada.

Williford accepted the tennis coaching position in 1974 for Granada. Now a math teacher, Williford enjoys the relaxation.

"I really don't miss the basketball coaching. Every once in a while I feel like coaching again, but I fight the urge." Citing a much more important reason, Williford simply states, "You really don't put in enough time with your family as a basketball coach. It's a 12-month job. Just teaching math and coaching tennis, I've had a lot more time with my family."

Using logic that would baffle an average philosopher, Williford jokingly traces the origin of... FOOTBALL?? "It was actually a basketball coach that invented the game of football," he tells all of the football coaches. "The reason for that is he wanted to keep the boys out of the pool halls in the fall."

We'll just let that one slip right by, Lee.

might feel slighted at not being included in the post-season playoffs. However, a good case can be made for adding the San Francisco Section to the CCS and the Oakland Section to the NCS. Then they too could be included in the playoffs.

The season would still end about the week before Christmas but what's wrong with that. The Southern and Los Angeles City Sections have been doing this for years and their championship games have drawn large crowds.

Some basketball coaches might say the extended playoffs would interfere with their seasons since a lot of football players also compete in basketball. Again, using the Southland as an example, has section football playoffs hurt the prep basketball teams there any?

Hardly, Los Angeles is one of the prep cage hotbeds of the country.

So, let's get on with these extended playoffs. In this way we could finally arrive at a true Bay Area champion.

And this type of playoff would be a lot more objective than any writers or coaches poll, (no matter how well-intentioned) could ever be.

The festival is the kick off of the "horror season" for the Jaycees, who open their House of Horrors at The Barn the same night.

Age divisions for the art contest are four years and under, 5 - 7 years, 8 - 12 years and 13 and up. First and second prizes will be given in each group. Approved mediums are crayons, pen, chalk or paint.

New teen slant

PLEASANTON — The winds of change are blowing across the West Winds Teen Center as drop-in hours are being curtailed severely and replaced by more excursions and other specialized activities.

A new philosophy puts drop-in times at a minimum to allow more time for specialized activities. Drop-in hours will be cut back to 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Monday, Wednesday and Friday and from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m. Saturday evenings only.

The first and third Monday evenings of each month will provide time for teens interested in playing guitar, learning new techniques and songs and getting together with others of similar interest. The second and fourth Mondays will be movie nights.

The hard work is over and these Pleasanton youths are enjoying the fruits (and toppings) of their own labor after building their own ice cream sundaes at Swensen's Ice Cream in San Ramon. The whole idea was an excursion from the West Wind Youth Center. From left Swensen's owner Ron Pacheco, Dan Crall, Dave Ride, Kathy Jordan, Cindy Stout and park and recreation department advisor Dan Diez are proving what the poet meant when he said, "The only emperor is the emperor of ice cream." (Times Photo)

Tuesday and Thursday afternoons from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. will be set aside for Project Kickback, an alternative activity program for youth. Tuesday and Thursday evenings will be reserved for "On the Go" nights from 6:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. for mini-excursions to various activities in the Bay Area.

The first Wednesday of each month will be set aside for the ski club and bike club meetings. Every other Wednesday evening there will be time for chess and table games. The recreation department and the center staff welcomes any comments or ideas. For information call 846-3202, ext. 215.

Young authors

Winners at the county and regional level for outstanding work in their 4-H books in various projects are Kim Hefner, Wayne Paul, Linda Beede, Kim Anderson, Jan Morris and Cydni Benthussen. Linda Beede placed as fifth alternate at the state level while Kim Anderson was first alternate at the same level. Others, not pictured, but also winners, are Alex Stavros, David Madsen, Caroline Mead, Laura-lee Hinde, Robert Ross, Toni Bettencourt, Cuffy Cathcart and Linda Larsen.

Manager would guide San Ramon

DANVILLE — Town Now, proponents for Alamo, Danville and San Ramon cityhood, say incorporation would take place under general state laws using a council-manager form of government.

Ninety-five per cent of California cities have this form of local government. Department heads will report individually to the town manager who, in turn, will be responsible to the town council.

Five town council members will be elected and serve four-year overlapping terms. The two council members receiving the most votes will serve four years. The three receiving the next highest number of votes will serve two years.

A mayor will be elected annually by the town council from its members. He or she will continue to vote as a council member and preside over their meetings.

Council members will serve without compensation except for reimbursement for out-of-pocket expenses.

Salaried employees and their duties are: Town Manager, a council appointee serving as its administrative and executive arm. The position requires a support staff.

Planning Director, a full-time employee responsible for administration of planning and zoning. An assistant planner and support staff are needed.

Town Engineer, junior civil engineer and support staff will be hired to monitor contract work and perform various engineering services. The town will be responsible for street construction, maintenance and other public works projects. It is recommended these services be contracted.

Municipal Attorney, retained on a part-time basis providing legal services for the town. A single retainer fee will cover service costs other than litigation including clerical support.

Council members will live in the valley, be elected by valley voters and be accountable to its residents.

Candidate plans appearances

DANVILLE — Claudia Nemir, candidate for the proposed town council that would represent Alamo, Danville and San Ramon if incorporation passes Nov. 2, has scheduled several appearances during the coming week.

Oct. 21, 10 a.m., a public coffee at 1331 Danville Blvd. in Alamo. Marlene Farrell and Cleo Hendricks are co-hostesses. For further information call 837-6292.

Oct. 21, 12 noon, Kiwanis luncheon at the Brass Door in Alamo. At 7:30 p.m. the Alamo Improvement Association's will be sponsoring Nemir at a town meeting at Rancho Romero School.

Oct. 25, 8 p.m. a coffee will be held in the library of Stone Valley School. Nemir's sponsors for this event are Florence McAuley (837-9565), George McCulley (837-1890) and Sue Paul (939-2475).

Oct. 26 Nemir will meet with members of the AAUW Cultural Interests group at the home of Mary Ellen Brown, 24 Sorrel Ct., Danville at 10 a.m.

Oct. 27, 8 p.m. a coffee will be held by Ellen Luthy at 401 Barranca Ct. (837-4143).

Red Cross pulls out

The Red Cross is no longer part of the nationwide blood clearinghouse program which enables donors to make blood contributions on behalf of patients in other areas of the country.

BICENTENNIAL FACTS

Elizabeth, wife of Royal Governor William Franklin, of New Jersey, appealed to her father-in-law, Benjamin to "relieve our troubles and have William released." The Governor was voted "an enemy to the liberties of the country" by the N. J. Provincial Congress and was arrested and imprisoned seven weeks previously. The elder Franklin had refused to discuss his Tory son's fate, and there was no record of any reply to Elizabeth's plea. The World Almanac reports.

The American National Red Cross Blood Program withdrew Monday as a member of the American Association of Blood Banks Clearinghouse program.

The Blood Bank of the Alameda - Contra Costa Medical Association, which sponsors "Bloodmobiles" at various Valley points, is still a member of the Clearinghouse and will continue to transfer blood credits for the benefit of patients they serve, locally and nationally.

Firemen's quick action saves man in Livermore

LIVERMORE — Quick action by Alameda County firemen yesterday morning saved the life of a man who suddenly quit breathing. A rescue team was called 1:40 a.m. by occupants of 2552 Buena Vista Ave., who said Bill Clark was having difficulty breathing. When fireman Don Staysa entered the house he could not find a pulsebeat or any indication of life from the victim. The fireman immediately began cardio pulmonary resuscitation, the continuous pushing on the chest, along with mouth to mouth resuscitation. As he continued this for several minutes, Captain Aaron Rasmussen set up a mechanical resuscitator which administered oxygen when Clark's pulse and respiration returned. Clark, 31, was taken to Valley Memorial Hospital where he is listed in satisfactory condition. Hospital officials said he had a "medical problem" but did not disclose the nature of the illness.

A $21 million 'wish list' CCC seeking federal funds

Lesher News Bureau
MARTINEZ — The county Public Works Department has put the finishing touches on a $21 million project "wish list" which it will now send to the federal government.

Vernon L. Cline, public works director, told the Board of Supervisors Tuesday that the list is being submitted to the Seattle office of the Economic Development Administration under the Public Works Employment Act of 1976.

Cline said, "We have no way of knowing at this time which, if any, of these project applications will be approved."

He said the county made no attempt to list the projects by priority. He said it would be up to the EDA to make that decision.

The list of 27 projects included something for almost every area in the county. About half of the $21 million would go toward road reconstruction, resurfacing and widening.

The county is asking for $1.1 million to rebuild a sub-standard bridge on Waterfront Road over the Santa Fe Railroad tracks a mile east of Martinez.

Also included under road projects is $300,000 to construct ramps in curbs at various locations throughout unincorporated areas of the county to help people in wheelchairs.

The list asks for $4.5 million for 17 flood control projects. The largest projects on this list are the 6,600-foot storm drain along Bradley Avenue and Walnut Avenue near Walnut Creek and the 1,000-foot storm drain in San Miguel Drive in south Walnut Creek. The estimated cost of the Walnut Boulevard drain is $2.2 million, and of the San Miguel Drain, $293,000.

The county is asking for $5.5 million for 13 building projects.

These include $265,000 for the restoration of the John Marsh home near Brentwood; $227,000 for a recreation center at Bay View Park near Pinole; and $308,000 for a therapeutic swimming pool at the George Miller School for handicapped children in Richmond.

Also on the list are $700,000 for a kitchen and dining hall at the branch jail in Clayton; $425,000 for an addition to the Flood Control Building in Martinez; $156,000 for a building for the Moraga Protection District; and $175,000 for a repair building to maintain fire equipment in Concord.

Also $600,000 to remodel portions of the county Administration Building and install improvements in the county Courthouse; $500,000 to air condition B, D, E, H, I, J and M wards at the County Hospital and make other improvements at that site; $751,000 to air condition sections of Juvenile Hall; and $128,000 to construct toilet facilities and other improvements at Montalvin Manor Park near Pinole.

Also $301,000 to complete the last phase of the Orinda Community Center Park; and $177,000 to help in the construction of a women's minimum security, work furlough education center in Richmond.

Sunol Glen trustees may okay land sale

SUNOL — A tiny portion of land the Sunol Glen School District inherited in the early 1900s may be put up for sale.

The nine-tenths of an acre on Sheridan Road has never been used by the district.

Sunol Glen school trustees, meeting earlier this week, also heard a progress report from faculty member Vivian Scheib on her work for a doctorate in education. Mrs. Scheib is working on a values clarification project through Brigham Young University. She is first grade and remedial reading teacher at Sunol Glen.

The board acted to change some objectives of the Early Childhood Education program at the school and approved changes in membership of the school advisory committee.

Livermore trustees seek new federal program funds

LIVERMORE — The Livermore Unified School District will be angling for about $1 million in building funds from the federal government.

There is some $250 million available throughout California for projects which must be applied for in the next month. Purpose of the nationwide federal program is to pump more money into communities to create jobs. Any public agency may compete for "Local Purpose Capital Improvement Program" money.

If the district gets the money, it will be spent on three projects: Expansion of the Granada High girls' gym facilities; Enlargement of Mendenhall Intermediate School's indoor exercise room into a full gymnasium; and solar heating and cooling at the new Sunset East school.

Trustees authorized Superintendent Leo Croce to pay $10,000 to consultant Howard Orrick to prepare the district's grant proposal. If the district gets the money, he will get another $7,500 of it.

Livermore already has the Sunset School solar project drawn up. It was submitted to ERDA — Energy Research and Development Administration — last year but was turned down. The new proposal will incorporate some changes, Superintendent Croce promised.

Also on the horizon for the district is a thorough check to see where schools' weak points are regarding fires and vandalism.

Horrified by Sunday's fire in San Ramon, which demolished Neil Armstrong School, trustee Jim McFarlane suggested asking the Livermore Fire Department to check the buildings' fire alarm systems.

Trustee Jim Davis called for a review of school fire safety procedures. Board president Manuel Prado suggested designing schools to minimize their susceptibility to vandalism.

While on the subject of buildings, trustee McFarlane plumped for gradual replacement of existing lighting with full spectrum lights.

He reported studies have shown that exposure to sunlight or full — spectrum lighting is much healthier than conventional indoor lighting and added that the Amador High School District has already begun a replacement program in Pleasanton and Dublin.

There was good news from the facilities department — the sale of the unused Olivina school site, purchased in 1963 and sold recently to a church group for $62,000.

The site was bought with money borrowed from the state, but since the loan had been repaid in full, Livermore is free to spend the $62,000 on any capital outlay project, reported Superintendent Croce.

According to finance chief Bruce Jamieson, the money can be held in the bank indefinitely until spent, but must go for building improvements or site purchase.

The Olivina site was bought at a time when the district was beginning to grow rapidly and it appeared an elementary school would be needed in the area just off Murrieta Boulevard.

Since then, the district was leasing it out for grazing. A larger site was purchased a half — mile up the road, on Murrieta at Las Positas, and it eventually became the site of the administration building and two schools. This year, the board agreed to sell off the unwanted 10 — acre site at a public auction. The church group were the only bidders.

Halloween party set for youths

PLEASANTON — Local youths can partake of Halloween entertainment at the Veterans Memorial Building Sunday night.

From 6 to 7:30 p.m. children up to nine years old and their parents are invited to participate in a costume parade, 30 minutes of cartoons and refreshments. From 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. youngsters nine to 14 can view the movie "Tales from the Crypt." All is free and is sponsored by the Pleasanton Rotary Club and the city recreation department.

Valleyite to attend world meet

Janie Aivagadis of Livermore will be joining thousands of followers of Eckankar in Seattle this weekend for the 10th worldwide seminar, "ECK, the Celestial Language."

The seminar is a tribute to Sri Paul Twitchell, modern — day founder of Eckankar, which is said to be an ancient teaching dating from the beginnings of human history and originating in the Himalayas.

According to Sri Darwin Gross, current leader of Eckankar, who will speak at the gathering in the Seattle Center Arena, "Eckankar is a teaching which gives knowledge of both the Light and Sound, providing proof of the ultimate survival of man. The emphasis in Eckankar is in the individual's own direct experience."

A cornerstone of Eckankar is "soul travel," described by Gross as a process "to reach God, or that state of religious awareness which many saints and holy men were reported to have reached. The results service mankind and help build a more positive civilization."

"Soul travel will provide the student with freedom on every plane in the vast worlds of God. There is a vast difference between astral projection and soul travel. Soul travel gives the student self — realization and God — realization."

Taste Science Succeeds.

'Enriched Flavor'™ breakthrough brings unprecedented taste to low tar smoking.

By "cracking" cigarette smoke down into separate ingredients, researchers at Philip Morris discovered very special "key" flavor units that deliver taste way out of proportion to tar.

The discovery is called 'Enriched Flavor'.

The cigarette packed with 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco is MERIT. At 9 mg., one of the lowest tar levels in smoking today.

Yet, MERIT actually packs the taste of cigarettes having more tar.

© Philip Morris Inc. 1976

9 mg. "tar," 0.7 mg. nicotine av. per cigarette by FTC Method.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

Up to 60% more tar.

If you smoke, you'll be interested.

Tests Verify Taste

9 mg. tar MERIT was taste-tested against current leading low tar cigarettes ranging from 11 mg. to 15 mg. tar.

Thousands of smokers were tested. The majority reported that even if the cigarette tested had up to 60% more tar than MERIT, MERIT delivered as much — or more — taste.

You've been smoking "low tar, good taste" claims long enough. Now smoke the cigarette.
